A Valuable Stamp British Columbia One-Cent Is Again For Sale

The world's No. 1 stamp—the famous British Columbia one-cent—is going under the hammer again. This stamp has changed hands in parts nine years ago when the world-famous collector of Court Chubbey was forced to sell it. It went to the late Arthur Hild of Tinn for the second figure of $22,000.

Its first appearance will be in London, where it is being sold by a leading stamp collector has announced he will dispose of the item to the highest bidder. Hild died some time before his death that he would part with it for less than $50,000. Previous to the sale the widow had the stamp insured for $45,000.

This stamp, found in an attic in British Columbia by a boy, who sold it to a local collector for $150, is on a poor grade of magnesia-colored paper, and appears to be a local print from hand-set type. It has the initials of the postmaster, "E. D. W." written in the top right corner.

Within a half-hour box in the center is a sailing ship above which is the name "British Columbia." At one side is a "postage" and at the other "one cent."

The stamp apparently was locally printed in 1858, because the supply from London had failed to arrive. While it is of a local denomination, collectors say this apparently is the only one of its kind. The same issue are all four cents. It is believed that only a few of the stamps were made.

After its sale to a British Columbia collector, it was sold to a collector in a number of years, and then went to Court Chubbey, an American who collected stamps. He died in 1900, and his son had it given him. It was probably the last one he had. It is now in the British Museum but it is not on file. It is a very rare stamp, and is valued as part of the German collection. The proceeds from the sale of the stamp will be $22,000 for the one stamp.

A Romantic Figure

Lawrence Of Arabia had to be again seeking freedom.

One of the most romantic figures of the Great War and post-war period, Lawrence of Arabia, again is being sought from the phantoms of the world.

An Arabist, T. K. Shaw, of the British Museum, has been asked to search for him. He is a man who has been a leading part in the Arab revolt against the Turks. He is a man who has been a leading part in the Arab revolt against the Turks. He is a man who has been a leading part in the Arab revolt against the Turks.

But requiring still more evidence, Shaw is in need of the six, seven, eight, and nine, and then on to Afghanistan to help Amman's alleged move against Great Britain. He is a man who has been a leading part in the Arab revolt against the Turks.

After the war Lawrence, or Shaw, was in need of the six, seven, eight, and nine, and then on to Afghanistan to help Amman's alleged move against Great Britain. He is a man who has been a leading part in the Arab revolt against the Turks.

Later he went to India to work against the Reds. Returning again, he would be away a month at a time, often upon some mysterious mission.

He was reported at the time of his violent retirement that he could have had almost any post. Britain had to offer in the near east, but he turned down all honors. He even refused to accept decorations.

How Mechanism Works

Secret Of Call By Automatic Telephone Explained

It is estimated that the date of the automatic telephone in this country travel nearly 350,000 miles every year. Even passing through the shortest distance, a telephone call on a city exchange is a travel over a foot or more. If a telephone number is dialed with the receiver switched on to the same number of a number of calls, the telephone is the dial revolves. These clicks are the secret of the automatic telephone. Inside every dial telephone is a circular wheel with ten angles on the rim. By dialing a number this wheel is wound up. On the return journey it makes a series of clicks, making an electrical impulse to set over the line. The sequence and combination of the impulses are sorted out at the exchange, and the call is "routed" to the destination.

Finest Cooks In World

Men Have Proved Themselves Greatly Superior To Women

The death of M. Roeffler, who was chief chef of the Ravel Hotel, London, for a great many years, is a reminder of the fact that although cooking is generally recognized as a woman's specialty, the best cooks in the world are men. Most of them are trained in France and Italy. Those who serve the food in big hotels are men, men who make plain foods marvellous with mysterious additions and methods of preparation, and invent dishes peculiarly their own and for which they are famous. Roeffler, for instance, claimed that there are 50 ways of cooking fish and eggs. Anglo who has ever dined at the Ravel Hotel and sampled what could be done with a potato, an egg, will readily believe Roeffler was not exaggerating.

Continental chefs take their work very seriously. To them the preparation of food is not just as much as music or painting, and one that is as much a craft, study and experiment. And there is no food more highly valued than meat of the best muttons and potatoes before the public. THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alne Michaelis

EXULTATION IN STORM

When clouds pile up in the east,
And the forces of wind are released,
Then a voice in my burning cries
And a light in my eyes,
I am part of the glorious storm
And a part of the glorious storm.
I am part of the glorious storm
And a part of the glorious storm.
I am part of the glorious storm
And a part of the glorious storm.
